MR. R. R. FARR is editor, ex-officio, of the and disseminated without personal expense a larger majority than he was before. anything that he may write. He avails himself of the facility thus afforded him, and Randall and others-while not in the city, prostitutes his position to advance the low, purposes of partisanism, and, in the August number of the misnamed publication referred to, makes himself ridiculous by wandering from the province of both his offices and criticising Judge Wellford's recent decision of a law case. But what may not be expected of a superintendent of the public instruction of a large and populous State who, in the same number of the publication to which reference is made, spells ventilation with a double l, and, in one short paragraph, speaks of himself in the first and third person singular and first person plural number, using the personal pronouns I, he and we indiscriminately and with an ignorant disregard of the proprieties of language that would be censurable in the dullest pupil in the primary schools? The Mahoneites are not the best instructors the people of the State could have selected for their children.

A MAN who was arrested in Washington last week for a pettey offense jumped out of the police van, ran off and apparently escaped. But his dead body was found in the river yesterday, and it has been ascertained that in his effort to evade his pursuers he attempted to hide under a bridge but made an under estimate of the depth of the water. Disobedience never goes unpunishen. That man was taught by the catechism that he should have been contented with his position in the van in which it had pleased Providence to place him.

THOUGH THE republicans are opposed to relieving the poor seamstresses of the tax they have to pay upon every thread they use, they were extremely anxious at the last session of Congress to remove the tax upon the perfumery with which fashionable women besprinkle themselves so lavishly.

It will be seen by an advertisement in the GAZETTE that the forty-fifth annual session of the Virginia Modical College at Richmond will begin on the first Monday in October. The course of medical instruction is equaled by few institutions in the country, and the advantages possessed by this college will be cultivated to the highest possible degree. The prospects for the coming session are, we are pleased to learn, very promising.

The Sultan has directed that Arabi Pasha shall be declared to be violating the principles of the Koran. The terms of the Anglo-Turkish military convention are not yet settled. The proclamation declaring Arabi a rebel was only obtained by the ministerial party, representing that if this was not done there would be war between Turkey and England. Arabi has been invited to lay down his arms, and until a reply is received from him the proclamation will not become official. The British are reported to have repulsed the Arabs yesterday after a slight skirmish on the western side of Alexandria.

The Arabs have appeared in strong force at Suez, and the British commander is preparing to resist any movement they may make. POLITICAL.

To the editor of the Alexandria Gazette: Will you pardon me for kindly remonstrating through your columns with your that the rather querulous spirit of his communication of the 11th does injustice to his neighbors, and I trust to himself. He seems to forget that a Congressional district whether cast on one side of a ridge or the other. I am sure he will admit it is unwise to split that vote into cliques, cut up the territory into parishes and foster sectional jealousies. Nothing can be more impolitic, than for the yote just over the Blue Hills, to isolate itself, to hint at diversity of interest and antagonisms of opinion. Diversity breeds diversity, antagonisms beget war.

The people of the "three counties over the Ridge," are a fine and noble people, but it is not true that they have been unfairly dealt with in the distribution of honors. The highest office in Virginias gift, has been just vacated by Governor Holliday, of Winchester. James M. Mason, of Winchester, was a Senator for about fifteen years before the war. Robert Y. Conrad, of Winchester. was elected our first representative in Congress after the war. Thomas Fauntleroy, of Winchester, will occupy a seat on the bench of the Court of Appeals, and prevent a better man from filling it. Major Robert W. Hunter, of Winchester, carried our vote and our voice to the convention which nominated Hancock. Indeed, instead of having been slighted, the valley seems to have "supped full of honors." It is true it has not worn all, but I am sure it will not desire to The association of Mr. Barbour's name with Neale's is conspicuously unjust, and I fear "Valley" would have found no offense in this association, but for Mr. Neale's recent misconduct. I fear he seeks now to transfer to Mr. B. some of the imagined unpopularity of Neale. But your present correspondent can inform him, that Mr. Neale did not dictate Mr. B's. nomination." In the convention which nominated him, Alexandria appeared upon the floor, "demanding her rights" and complaining that she had "submitted long enough to being ignored, &c," and these pretensions had gotten the body into such a dilemma, that disorganization and dissension were impending, unless some man could be found, strong enough to shake the Alexandria delegation loose from Neale. It was to Major R. W. Hunter, of Winchester, that the happy thought of naming Mr. Barbour, occurred. It was Howard N. Rector, of Loudoun, who nominated him, and every observer could see that this nomination when pressed, would be accepted. It was this state of affairs which induced Mr. Neale to "accept the situation," upon condition that he should appear to have dictated it. The truth is, we used Mr. Barbour to save our party, and should be grateful that he secured us, under the most unfavorable auspices, our greatest triumph.

I protest against "Valley's" dragging the railroads into a congressional canvass, thus distracting our party with new and irrelevant issues, and arming against our already weakened forces, what "Valley" evidently esteems a formidable foe. I do not believe Major Conrad will sympathize with any such unnecessary and unwise warfare -if he does, he must not be our candidate in this canvass.

We are in no condition to drag our coattails around for new enemies. For one I wish to multiply friends and diminish foes. If Major Courad proposes to fight the railroads and not the readjusters, depend upon it, we cannot afford to back him in that fight just now. So far from Mr. Barbour's being at the head of a railroad diminishing his elegibility, call attention to the fact that his double duties have simply brought out and displayed the sound judgment and talent fors work and administration, which his friends have always ascribed to him. No man has or can complain of his neglect of any duty as our representative. The democracy of the nation has put him on its Executive Committee, and that committee has put him on the sub committee of finance. The Directors of the Virginia Midland have re-elected him President, and until some one charges him with neglect of some duty, it is idle to speculate upon his being over-burdened. But the truth is "Valley" over-rates the unpopularity of railroads.

The frets over a crippled cow, the jealousy of unemployed lawyers, &c., are not the complaints of "a people.

The charge that Mr. Barbour will prove a 'wet blanket" to the Valley is rather startling If "Valley" will take the trouble to count the votes, he will be surprised, perhaps, to find that Mr. B. beat a Winchester readjuster, democrat and a republican in Major Conrad's own home, by a larger majority than Major Conrad has yet received from the same constituency. "Valley" will therefore, pardon outsiders if they prefer the "returns" to prophesy.

I will not comment upon the muttered threat in the last paragraph of "Valley's" Johnston called two policemen and had letter. I feel sure he does not mean or refriend of Major Conrad than your present correspondent, and Major Conrad's best friends have advised him to defer his aspirations until the State has been redeemed.

Mr. Barbour's Nomination. The Warrenton True-Index well says:

"The large majority rolled up for Hon. J. S. Barbour in the last election shows his hold upon the masses. His selection by his party in Congress as a member of the National Democratic Committe and from that Committee as one of its Board of Finance. shows the estimate in which he is held in Washington, and indicates the influence which he, as a comparatively new member, will exert in the next Congress, (which will probably be Democratic,) if it be the will of his constituents to follow precedent and reelect him. Why not give this popular Representative and man of growing usefulness a unanimous nomination ?

The same paper in an appeal for the success of the general ticket in the State, but especially in this district, says:

"The party is rich in talent. It is rich n moral worth. It has orators upon its muster rolls that can draw, and thrill, and lead the "old Guard," and to them the party owes a debt impossible for it to discharge at this juncture. Cannot these persuade themselves to postpone their claims and push them when this crisis is past, a crisis that will dignify any sacrifice lain on the altar of party success? There is no child's play before the party. It has to make every Democrata qualified voter, or encounter defeat, The delinquent list in every county in previous elections have been too long to doubt this. The draft which the adversary has made on Federal office-holders emphasize the alternative. Let no candidate ignore it. Let no Democratic nominee forget it. Let the empty hand that would grasp honors bear it in remembrance. This caution is deplored, but it must be heeded. In the last Congressional canvass more than a thousand delinquents had to be qualified in a single county of the 8th District. Then the party had assistance from the national Democratic Committee. Now it will have none, and the burthen of expense must mainly fall where to contribute to our campaign fund $2 for its honors go. The Democrats everywhere
